COMMENTARY

The performance of global equity markets was strong again over the quarter, with markets largely discounting the chances of a "hard Brexit" and instead focused on central banking policy as well as the upcoming US presidential election. The period saw a large reversion towards cyclicity, with sectors such as technology and materials outperforming "bond proxy" sectors driven in part by increasing inflation expectations.

Against this backdrop the GEF returned 8.9% against the benchmark return of 7.9%. Within the roster value-orientated managers such as the GLG Japan CoreAlpha fund had a very good quarter as their positions in Japanese banks and materials performed relatively well. The Stonehage Fleming Core UK and Majeide UK Equity funds also performed well after benefitting from their overweight commodity exposure as well as holdings in selective UK banks such as HSBC and Barclays.

On the other hand the Stonehage Fleming UK Equity Income fund had a challenging quarter due to the high level of cash holding in the fund as well as large overweight position in global healthcare names. The Stonehage Fleming Global Select Equity Fund also underperformed due to lack of financials exposure, with stock selection generally positive except for Capita which fell significantly after a profits warning.

There were no new investments added or disinvested from, and the portfolio's regional and stylistic positioning was little changed from the previous quarter.

Changes in the rates of exchange between currencies may cause the value of investments to go up or down in the reporting currency. Among the factors that may influence currency values are trade balances, the levels of short-term interest rates, differences in relative values of similar assets in different currencies, long-term opportunities for investment and capital appreciation and political developments.
