FUND COMMENTARY

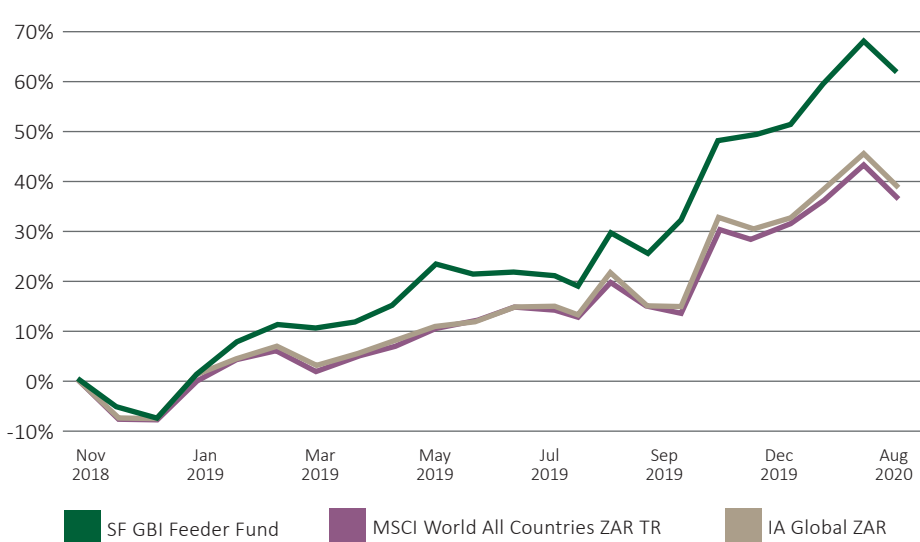

The stock market performance during September has stayed true to its historical form with a negative return. With the huge uncertainties around the US election, we can continue to expect stock market volatility for a while. Many northern hemisphere economies are currently at a critical moment in the battle with Coronavirus with little good news on this front. Investors understandably are concerned about the outlook as we head into the winter season.

As capital markets are forward looking (to the tune of around five quarters on average), we would guard against too much pessimism. Our constructive stance is not based on a particularly optimistic view of the world economy next year, but rather on a continuing slow economic recovery process potentially supporting stronger than expected earnings growth for many (not all) important businesses.

Many (if not most) businesses have cut costs to the bone during the virus crisis. We believe they will continue to be very cautious in accepting back all of those manageable costs as the economy recovers – they have learned new lessons in being more productive (especially through technology). Along with this, commodity and especially energy prices are low, saving many businesses large amounts in material and logistics costs. Further to this, finance costs are at historic lows currently, and are expected to remain as such for some time to come.

The market reacted well to the second quarter earnings drop, as they were actually much better than generally feared. We will not be surprised to see more of the same in this context when the third quarter earnings season starts towards the end of this month. Then, going forward, it may turn out that the above operational gearing and margin recovery start playing a larger role in earnings recovery than the economy does. The market usually reacts favourably to margin expansion and positive surprises.

¹ Advice fees are negotiable between the client and their adviser. Annual advice fees are paid through a re-purchase of units from the investor. The fund is available through certain LISPs which levy their own fees. A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The TER displayed, which is calculated using data for the period 1 November 2018 to 30 June 2020, is based on the ASISA methodology, is higher than the expected TER of the fund due to the high weight allocated to past costs prior to the increase in fund size. The estimated actual TER payable by a client investing into the fund today would be 1.04%. Transaction Costs are a necessary cost in administering the Financial Product and impacts Financial Product returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of Financial Product, the investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER. Disclosed performance information is calculated after all fees and costs deducted. ² All fees inclusive of VAT where applicable.
