COMMENTARY

The capital markets' sharp reaction to the Brexit referendum result unsettle many. The 11% drop in Sterling's value and the 6% drop in the FTSE100 index (an effective 16% drop in constant currency), along with a 7% drop in the MSCI World index and the ten year US Treasury yield slipping from 1.75% to 1.43% are all clear indications of the huge shock to overall investor sentiment.

We phrase this reaction as a yellow swan event – it was out there glaring at investors, with everyone knowing beforehand either outcome was a distinct possibility, but most investors taking a deliberate one-way bet on the result. The sudden realisation that the global political landscape may be changing was too much to bear for many investors.

Whilst such newfound uncertainties are expected to continue dampening investor confidence for a while, it is our impression that the most important decision facing equity investors is whether this event will lead to an imminent US recession. This statement is based on the premise that, historically, structural breaks in the US equity markets have generally discounted subsequent recessions well in advance. We continuously study multiple economic data series that have successful records in this context, and again conclude that we cannot form such impressions yet.

The UK economy is currently in somewhat of a sweet spot enjoying the benefits of a weaker currency, but facing little cost yet from leaving the EU. Our UK listed businesses operate globally, now becoming even more popular with domestic investors. More profoundly, the renewed flight to 'safety in bonds' with interest rates probably going to remain even lower for even longer, plays directly into our investment strategy of investing for sustainable dividend growth.

RISK FACTORS

Stonehage Fleming Global Best Ideas Equity Fund (the "Fund") is an equity fund. Investors should be willing and able to assume the risks of equity investing in particular, fluctuations in market price, adverse issuer or market information and the fact that equity securities rank below other corporate securities, including debt securities, in right of payment in the event of issuer insolvency. The value of the Fund's portfolio changes daily and can be affected by changes in currencies, interest rates, general market conditions and other political, social and economic developments, as well as specific matters relating to the companies in whose securities the Fund invests. The Fund may hold a relatively small number of stocks as compared to many other funds. This may make the Fund's performance more volatile than would be the case if it had a more diversified investment portfolio.

Changes in the rates of exchange between currencies may cause the value of investments to go up or down in the reporting currency. In general, underlying investments denominated in foreign currency are not hedged back into the reporting currency. Among the factors that may influence currency values are trade balances, the levels of short-term interest rates, differences in relative values of similar assets in different currencies, long-term opportunities for investment and capital appreciation and political developments. Values may also be affected by developments relating to controls and restrictions on foreign currency remittance of proceeds of investments in a non-sterling jurisdiction.

All investments risk the loss of capital. No guarantee or representation is made that the Fund will achieve its investment objective. The value of investments may go down as well as up and the distributions can also go down or up and you may not receive back the full value of your initial investment. The risks outlined here are some of the more specific risks applicable to investment in the Fund and investors' attention is drawn to Appendix II of the Prospectus which provides more information on the types of risk factors investors should consider.

Whilst every effort is made to provide investors with accurate and up to date information, some of the information may be rendered inaccurate by changes in applicable laws and regulations. For example, the levels and bases of taxation may change. No information in this document should be interpreted as investment advice. If you feel unsure about the suitability of this investment for you, please consult with a professional financial adviser.
