PERFORMANCE DISCLOSURE

Past performance is not a guide to future performance. The value of investments can fall. Investors may not get back the amount invested. Income from investments may vary and is not guaranteed. The return may increase or decrease due to currency fluctuations. Performance figures are net of fees and charges. The Fund may hold a relatively small number of stocks as compared to many other funds. This may make the Fund's performance more volatile than would be the case if it had a more diversified investment portfolio. For a full list of risks applicable to this fund, please refer to the Prospectus.

FUND COMMENTARY

The MSCI AC TR index grew by +2.1% over the past month (US$ terms). The last quarter of this calendar year therefore started off on a constructive footing, as has generally been the trend over the month of October and indeed the whole of the fourth quarter traditionally. This growth occurred off a high base for the third quarter and the year thus far (the index grew by +5.2% and 19.7% over the quarter and the year thus far respectively), which did not follow the traditionally weak trend over the third quarter.

Many pundits have the perception of an overheated market currently, and fear an imminent correction and risk of a bear market. Whilst it is impossible to predict a tactical short term correction, we can do in-depth research to understand the level of risk for an imminent US recession which has traditionally been the prominent trigger for a bear market.

We actively follow a wide array of US leading economic indicators. They have generally been successful in forecasting the next US recession well ahead of time, and therefore the structural peak in share prices. Only one of these indicators currently has a negative signal - US auto sales are at -1.4% at present. The other indicators remain constructive. It is especially pleasing that US industrial production and world trade are demonstrating healthy growth.

The current US reporting season is so far again delivering better than expected results, on both the top (revenue) and the bottom (earnings) line. The continuing low oil price keeps energy costs at bay, and S&P 500 company operating margins are on the rise again.

The combination of a constructive US economic outlook and healthy company results continues to support share prices despite the absence of investor exuberance.
